These letters have not been replied to, and it remains to be seen whether Mr. McElhose will move for a select committee to inquire into the matter at issue, or whether, by a mass adoption out of the House of statements made by him within the House, I will furnish me with the opportunity of testing the truth of those statements before the Supreme Court.

I have looked through the Herald's report of the proceedings, but I find no statement made by you that affects myself individually; but you are reported to have made the following remarks, namely:-

"Mr. Kidman received $1700 compensation for losses sustained in fulfilling a Government contract for the supply of meat, whereas another man really supplied the meat and Kidman was paid for no loss at all. He did not believe that this could be done without the connivance of the higher officials in the Treasury."

honour to request—that, on my own behalf, as the high permanent officer in the Treasury; and, second, in protection of the character of gentle men sitting with me in department—that you will have the goodness, in the interests of truth and justice, to waive your privilege as a member of Parliament, and put at your allocation of "concessions" in such specific terms and in such a shape as to

No. 2.

The Treasury, New South Wales.

Sir,—I have the honour to address you, on the 2 instant, on the subject of certain statements made by you in the Legislative Assembly on the evening of Wednesday last. Up to this date I have received from you no acknowledgment of the communication referred to, but you have substantially replied to my letter in your place in Parliament, where you are reported to have spoken as follows:

He held in his hand a letter which he had received from an understrapper of the Government, Mr. Geoffrey E. requesting him to state out of the House what he said about him in it. E. thought this conduct on part of a Government official, in trying to intimidate a member of Parliament in the performance of his duty, ought not to be tolerated. He would not allow any Accepting this as the only reply which it seems I likely to obtain from you, I now proceed to deal with it.

In the first place, I dissent entirely from the doctrine which you appear desirous to lay down—namely, that because a republican looks on office in the public service as a mere means to an end, he is therefore unworthy of it.

made against his character, under the specious pretext of public duty. I affirm no more than an obvious truth when I say that, in holding an office, the public servant forfeits none of his rights as a private citizen. It may, indeed, be difficult at all times to enforce those rights. The privilege of Parliament, for example, may be so abused by a member as to be almost impossible to enforce, and it would be equally difficult to allow him, without any upon the magnitude of the wrong (for which there is no measure) upon the heads of innocent and unoffending individuals; but at the moment the base and cowardly detractor emerges from the gossamorous shelter of "privilege" and meets the stand and columnist upon a common footing, the Supreme Court steps in and teaches the useful lesson that common rights must be respected and that the law takes account of no person's position.

I dissent, in the second place, from your description of my letter of the 19th instant as calculated to "intimidate you in the performance of your duty." The letter referred to is by no means a "threatening letter." On the contrary it is written in courteous terms, such as no reasonable person could object to. It does not question your right to be a member of the Board.

those statements should be made in such a shape as you could be put upon proof of them by persons who they aggrieved. In this there is surely no intimation And I do not admit your assumption that it is a part of "duty" of members of Parliament to calumniate persons who have no means of defending themselves.

But there is one part of your legitimate public d your loud-mouthed protestations, you have up to this time manifestly failed to perform. You say "that you not allow any intimidation of the kind to prevent you from doing your duty, and exposing what you believe to be gross robbery and corruption." After committing yourself to so public a declaration of high crimes and misdemeanors against somebody or other, why do the high sense of public duty which appears to be constantly oppressing you, obtain a select committee to inquire into the transaction with Mr. Kidman in 1879? Surely the great public wrong were then done—if you really believe or have reason to believe, that there has been 'gross and very real corruption'—it is your bounden duty to demand a full and the fullest inquiry, and in this way,...

For my part, I am quite content to meet you, whether before a select committee of the Legislative Assembly or before a jury in the Supreme Court. I challenge you to the adoption of either course, and I defy you to the proof of any matter or thing that tends to injure my personal honour and integrity.

any of honorable and important office, which from time to time evidenced the public approval of his use to say that your allegations are false and wrong. I demand that you prove them or retract them, unless I receive from you, in writing, any name, an apology and withdrawal of your article. I will then take the course which seems to me best.

EMANUEL SWEDENBORG.—A lecture on "Swedenborg" was held at the Lyceum hall, by Mr. George Slater, secretary of the New Church Society. There was a fair attendance, and the lecture, originally delivered by the Rev. R. Rogers, minister of the New Church, Birmingham, was listened to with interest. The lecture contained a popular account of Swedenborg's various philosophical works, interwoven with the opinions concerning them of great thinkers such as Emerson and Coleridge.

The deceased, Jaura, the son of a labourer, by a fall over a cliff from a low railway bridge, was taken to the Sydney Infirmary, where a post-mortem examination of the body, deposited that the deceased, when brought into the Infirmary, was insensible, and that he died in that condition about nine hours after admission. There was an extensive fracture of the left side of the skull, the brain being much congested; there was also a good deal of extravasated blood underneath the skull, corresponding to the fracture, and blood had been effused between the brain and its membrane. These injuries were the cause of death. The boy named Jaura, eleven years of age, was with Lawrence during the fatal occurrence, and who was accompanied by a brother Saturday, was again placed under examination. His name said, in connection to what he before stated, he was taking peaches from Mr. Hyman's garden, while he was at the same time endeavoring to break through the fence, and in so doing he was hurrying over the fence, to escape from a person whom they saw approaching, they both lost their foothold and together fell into the street. The boundary fence of the garden on the street side was on the edge of a cliff, below which Lower Fort street had been excavated. The verdict of the jury was that of accidental death.

SYDNEY INFIRMARY.—The following cases have been received for treatment:—Thomas Kennedy, fracture of one of his arms; John McDougall, fracture of radius; James Johnston, fracture of his arm; Bridget Galvin, wound on the forehead; Robert Carter, injury to elbow; John De Vau, scalp wound on the left side of the head; Joseph Proctor and Charles Morrison, who had each injured their hands by burning; William Henry Yale, who was

COST OF RAILWAYS IN NEW SOUTH WALES.—In reply to a correspondent, who inquires what amount is charged on the gross revenue of New South Wales on account of the railways of the colony, we have to state that the total amount expended on our railways up to the end of 1875 was £7,246,379, the interest on which at 4 per cent—the average rate at which our loans have been effected—amounts to £362,269. The net earnings for 1875 amounted to £318,474, which, deducted from the interest given above, leaves a sum of £43,790 to be defrayed out of the general revenue. The question for 1876 are not yet completed, but we are assured that they will show a still more favourable state of affairs.

delivering goods at the above station, through the use of proper storage accommodation, and a better system," he relates the following case, which occurred to him:—"In one west end, when trucks can be loaded outside, it is bad enough to see the unnecessary detention caused by the system of taking delivery of goods causes a loss to the carriers alone in time, equal at the lowest calculation, of £3000 per annum, in addition to the loss to the shippers, who contribute their share of the expense of mismanagement through the revenue. The lost time of the porters stowing wool, in the shed, and the taxation in the following:—A unit of space, can be estimated by the following:—This office, since the war, can explain the routine:—Presented in order at the inquiry office for a toil of leather from Windsor; received delivery note with instructions turn; porter could not tell whether leather was in shed or truck; searched shed in vain, then tried Botan-street, and there found the trucks. Porter dragged the leather across the lines, between loaded trucks, to near railway store, then returned with van round goods-station to load it. This occupied one hour of the porter's time (say 1s.), and one and a half of the carrier's, making altogether 2s. 6d., as well as breaking the regulations and the risk of an accident by crossing the lines. For the want of a storage room the trucks cannot be unloaded with dispatch. Then follows a wait for the leather-laden trucks in the busiest part of the day, whilst both carrier and porters are waiting about, which would not be tolerated for one moment anywhere but in a Government establishment.

Adocate) at the delay that has occurred in the resignation of his seat by the member for Orange. Mr. Nelson recently came to Grand Rapids to express purpose, as all understood, of announcing his intention of taking this step, and he accorded my did, in the most public and emphatic manner, announce his intention to his constituents at a public meeting convened by himself at the courthouse. It was generally understood was considered a most critical time for Orange to be left without a representative, and fearing that delay might occur in selecting a successor to Mr. Nelson, inquiries were made of him as to whether it was his intention as to whether he could make it convenient to retain his seat until after the question of the railway extension should be decided. Mr. Nelson distinctly stated that in consequence of urgent private affairs he could not defer his resignation, and that his resignation was considered final. He subsequently intimated fixed upon by himself for his resignation without assigning any reason for so doing; but we have no desire to jump to a hasty conclusion, which circumstance may afterwards prove to have been unwarrantable.

In the final instance, "Crisis" has no obligation to publish anything in the hands of the Spokesman on Friday, the 19th instant. Directly Mr. Nelson's resignation was definitely made known, an influential resignation was forwarded to Mr. Columbus, who in reply has signified his willingness to resign. Orange. The question is, however, continually being asked now, has Mr. Nelson changed his mind? We cannot suppose for a moment that such is the case, because it must be clear to him that by taking such a course he would be putting himself in a position in an entirely false position, and would completely lose their confidence. It must be borne in mind that Mr. Nelson's determination to resign was purely his own voluntary act, and that once he had made up his mind he was so far committed both himself and his constituents that he cannot possibly withdraw with honour. All we can at present say on the subject, is that it is odd Mr.

ANNIVERSARY DAY AT NEWCASTLE.—Our correspondent states that the eighty-ninth anniversary of the colony was duly observed in the city of Newcastle and district. The present depression, however, made its presence felt for it is generally admitted that there has not been a more gloomy and dejected situation amongst the holiday folk than on that day; there were fewer people, and a great many of them seemed to think they were performing a duty, in celebrating the day, but not enjoying a pleasure. The flag, however, flew from the Cape and Allan's hill, from Nobby's, and from the various ships in port. The up-former a castles, the attractions up the line being, perhaps, greater than those of Newcastle. In town, the principal points of interest were the grounds of the Imbecile Asylum and the Newcastle racetrack. At the racetrack there was a very fair assemblage to witness the sports provided by the committee appointed by the members of the Homevuckee Lodge of Odd-fellows in this district. The principal items were four races, which were all well contested. Some very clever trapeze artists afforded a very pleasing change in the programme, and the Bu wood Band contributed some excellent music throughout the day. The children of St. Andrew's Sunday school, with their parents, participated in large numbers on an excursion to Tomahawk in the steam tug Rapid, kindly lent by Mr. J. C. Dibbs for the occasion. The St. James' Sunday school children spent their holiday in the H. Douglas boat on the river. The children of both are beginning

FRIGHTFUL ACCIDENT.—A shocking accident happened on Tuesday, at Rochford (says the London Mercury) of the 24th instant, to a little boy of between two and three years of age, the son of Mr. James Hemphill, farmer. The poor little fellow in playing about ran into a field of oats which his father was engaged cutting down with a reaping machine. The crop being higher than the child he was not observed until the machine was upon him. The result was that one of his legs was nearly cut off two above the ankle, and the other frightfully mangled. Mr. Lawton, of a neighbouring village, was sent for, and after dressing the wounds the little sufferer was taken to the Melbourne hospital.

LONDON, JANUARY 27.
